INTRODUCTION

Harmundi is a young band from São Paulo, Brazil, that blends traditional Irish music with worldwide influences - aiming to break stereotypes associated with the Celtic genre, to explore new postmodern horizons and to experiment with free improvisation and a unique psychedelic nuance.

The band was formed in 2017, and it began as an unpretentious hobby, an escape valve for three young musicians: overworked, anxious, stressed out and unhappy with their careers. Harmundi was, and still is, an outlet for learning Irish music, experimenting with our personal artistic influences, and reflecting upon issues of self-knowledge, mental-health and freedom.

Thus far, we have gained some attention playing in music venues in downtown São Paulo - home of the underground music scene at Brazil's cultural capital. We have released a 100% independently produced and home-recorded studio album ("Um Orvalho Boreal"), as well as three live ones ("2019: A Breeze Odyssey", "The Last Corvo" and "Whale Sessions" - the latter, our earliest and most experimental endeavour). Some of our tracks have been featured in international radio shows and podcasts, such as Marc Gunn's "Irish & Celtic Music Podcast" and Neil Vessey's "The Folk Pilot".
